

10 things to do after you're arrested

1. Call Steele Law

Call Margaret Steele. Communicate with Ms. Steele everything about the facts and the circumstances of your arrest.

2. Take Photos

Take photos of any injuries you have or damage to your property or anything related to the "crime scene."

2. Save Everything

Save all text messages, emails, Facebook posts, or statements made by the person accusing you of this crime.

3. Write it Down

Write down your version of the events while they are fresh in your mind and write down contact information for any potential witnesses that can help you.

4. Don't Talk Back

Do not respond to any text messages from your accuser or witnesses. A protection order will be in effect.

5. Keep it to Yourself

Do not share information with other inmates or people you don't know relating to your arrest.

6. Shut Down Social Media

Do not post to social media. Shut down or suspend all social media accounts.

8. Share it or Back it Up

Send all communications with the accuser to your attorney or save it to the cloud. Essential evidence is often lost. Back it up.

9. Focus on the Evidence

The only evidence that matters is evidence that actually exists. Act accordingly.

10. Be Patient

Quite possibly the hardest thing of all – be patient. This can be a slow process.
